AN INTIMATE PORTRAIT OF AUSTRALIA'S TROPICAL RAINFOREST

BY KAISA AND STANLEY BREEDEN

'Stanley Breeden is one of the revered veterans of Australian nature and landscape photography, who is today pushing the boundaries of digital imaging with his chosen subjects to even greater limits.'
Australian Photography Magazine

ABOUT THE BOOK

Few places in Australia are of such pivotal ecological importance as the tropical rainforests of northeast Queensland. Stunning in their diversity and vigour, they are all that remains of the great Gondwana forests that once covered the continent. As well as a spectacle of great beauty, they tell the story of flowering plant evolution.

In this book Kaisa and Stanley Breeden bring their photographic innovation and vision to Queensland's tropical rainforest. The techniques the Breedens pioneered in Wildflower Country – their exploration of Australia's southwest – are taken to new heights in this companion volume, with striking results. Their pictures capture not only the moods and cycles of the rainforest, but its essence.

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Stanley Breeden began photography as a teenager in the late 1950s. He has published over twenty books on Australian and Indian wildlife and has contributed to most major English language nature magazines. Stan has been the recipient of two Emmy Awards for his work as a documentary maker with National Geographic.

Kaisa Breeden is a third-generation artist who is captivated by the mastery of digital photography and fine art printing. Since convincing Stan to go digital, the pair have specialised in macro nature photography using natural light.
