Passionate readers are Champions of Literature

As a not-for-profit publishing house, Fremantle Press has played a major role in establishing the outstanding literary reputation Western Australia enjoys today.

Since its foundation in 1976, Fremantle Press's purpose has been to publish stories by Western Australians about Western Australia. Unique in Australia's publishing landscape, we are dedicated entirely to nurturing, developing and promoting the literature of our state.

Join our wonderful group of Fremantle Press Champions of Literature and indulge your passion for reading in 2017.

uniquely Western Australian stories

Why I am a Champion of Literature

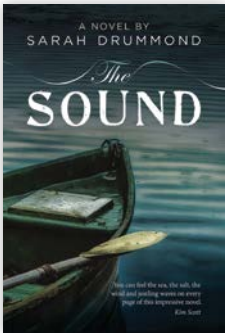

'Fremantle Press has an impressive track record of publishing world-class writers.

The Press was the first publisher for an extraordinary number of award-winning and bestselling authors like Joan London, Elizabeth Jolley, Craig Silvey, Liz Byrski, Gail Jones, Brenda Walker, Simone Lazaroo, Sally Morgan and Kim Scott.

I have pledged my support for Fremantle Press because it provides the first step for new and emerging Western Australian writers. No other publisher is as dedicated to publishing our uniquely Western Australian stories. Without Fremantle Press many local writers would have gone unpublished.'

- One title from the Fremantle Press Treasures collection
- Invitation to exclusive Champions of Literature events twice each year
- VIP invitations to all Fremantle Press events including book launches
- Acknowledgement by name on the Fremantle Press website and newsletter
- Personalised service for all your book purchases, including Champions of Literature bookplates and gift-wrapping
- Personalised booking service should you wish to invite a Fremantle Press author to attend your book club.

Supporting WA writers

'For 40 years Fremantle Press has supported the storytellers who've made Western Australian literature internationally renowned. Your donation will create many more opportunities for young writers like me to share our stories with the world.'

Madelaine Dickie, winner of the 2014 City of Fremantle T.A.G. Hungerford Award for Literature. Madelaine's book Troppo will be published in 2016.

'By supporting Fremantle Press, you are not only ensuring that Western Australian stories continue to be published, but you are also helping launch the careers of local writers like me.'

Melinda Tognini, author of Many Hearts, One Voice, 2015

'Western Australia is the home state of many of Australia's most loved and respected writers and many of these were first published by Fremantle Press. Your donation can create publishing opportunities both at home and overseas for the new generation of talented authors to continue the tradition.'

Liz Byrski, author of In Love and War, 2015

'Fremantle Press made my dream of becoming a published author real. This wasn't a pipe-dream; it was fifteen years in the making, fifteen years of very hard work. Now I have the pleasure and privilege of working with young writers, some of whom perhaps also hold this dream. And I am able to tell them: it is possible – if you work hard, if you read voraciously, if you persevere with your craft.

Without Fremantle Press, however, the dream and the work behind it might never come to fruition. I keep saying thank you to Fremantle Press, and I'll be saying it from beyond the grave. Thank you for your support!

Deb Fitzpatrick, author of The Break, 2014
